The Finer Things Club is considered by some to be the most exclusive club of Dunder Mifflin Inc., a local paper company. Pam, Toby and Oscar, the only members of the elite club, meet once a month to discuss books and art and celebrate culture "in a very civilized way."

Jim has expressed an ardent interest in the club. It would obviously be unfair of Pam to extend membership of the most exclusive club of the office to her husband just like that. So, Pam, Toby and Oscar collectively decide to take a trip with Jim to a museum in Scranton and base their decision on the visit.

On their trip to the museum, they find themselves staring at an ancient painting. Toby grabs the opportunity to interview Jim for the Finer Things Club. He asks him to take a good look at the painting and derive his own interpretation of it.

Can you help Jim earn a seat in the Finer Things Club?

Your job is to help Jim earn a seat in the Finer Things Club. We will show you the picture that caught everyone's attention at the museum. Submit your interpretation of the painting. The most creative, out of the box, thought-provoking interpretations stand a chance to win exciting prizes.
